SPICE is an international communication studies summer program for undergraduate students that takes place at the University of Erfurt in Germany. The program is run by the University of Erfurt in Germany and official U.S. partners: University of Oklahoma, University of Texas at Austin, and University of West Virginia.

Students will participate in two communication studies courses taught by faculty from the U.S. partner universities as well as from the University of Erfurt and local partner universities. Erfurt communication studies students will join American students in classes to make it a truly international experience. A three to four days trip to Berlin including visits to political and media organizations and sightseeing is part of the course program.

ACADEMIC PROGRAM
Every student will participate in two (out of four) intense courses:

Course I (June 16th to July 8th):
Prof. Dr. N. Bowman — Media Psychology and Influence

Course II (June 16th to July 8th):
Prof. Dr. J. Banks — Video Games as Communication

Course III (July 16th to August 6th):
Prof. Dr. S. Stroud — Communication Ethics

Course IV (July 15th to August 6th):
Prof. Dr. K. Tsetsura — Global and International Public Relations

ACCOMMODATION
Students will be hosted in single or double rooms in the University’s dorms on or nearby campus. Rooms are part of apartment units with shared bathroom, living space, and kitchen facilities. You will share the apartment with German or international students. You will need to provide a deposit for the room (not included in the costs). You will also be responsible for all meals.

COSTS
Program cost for SPICE 2017 is US$3,900. This price includes all tuition and fees for two courses (6 cr. hrs.), course materials as well as on-campus accommodation and the Berlin trip (10-13 July, 2017). NOT included are the flight, insurance, personal expenses, food and the additional excursions offered. Additional administration fees at your home university might apply (OU Study Abroad application is ab. $110).
