This course explores the relationship between law and policy making. We will review explanations for why law, lawyers, and courts have become powerful agents in government affairs, not just in the US, but also (and increasingly) in the developing world. We will use case studies in areas like race, gender, education, and environment to understand how social movements and interest groups use law and courts to seek change and why they succeed or fail. We will introduce contemporary sociolegal theories to shed light on forms of the law/policy interplay, other than litigation. Finally, we will discuss the consequences of such “legalization” or “juridification” of the policy process for democratic politics. Students will develop knowledge and skills by writing and sharing op-eds and policy memos on issues of their interest.
3323 Political Economy of Development
4013 Senior Capstone
While global events and affairs are largely driven by political actors vying for influence on the international scene, they also have an undeniable ethical dimension. From global terrorism, arms control, genocide, humanitarian intervention, global trade, and the global environment, ethical questions abound in the study of global politics. This course seeks to investigate the relationship between ethics and global politics. The focus of the class will be on the role that moral considerations play in determining how global actors behave, as well as the use of ethical frameworks as a way to appraise and critique global actors as they pursue their interests on the international scene.
