

Hi Everyone,

I hope you all are staying safe and healthy amidst all that is happening now. In addition to the resources highlighted on our home page (libraries.ou.edu) a number of publishers have opened up access to digital textbooks and other resources. A full list can be found on this guide however I wanted to highlight the following resources that may be particularly useful to your department:

University of California Press

All UC Press journals freely accessible through June 2020. (see Collabra: Psychology and others)

University of Michigan Press

1500+ University of Michigan ebook collection titles freely available to read until April 30, 2020.

JSTOR

Over 25K ebooks now openly available from a number of publishers on a wide variety of topics.

Open Libraries

Full digital scans of 1.7M+ books, freely available to read, from the Internet Archive. By signing up for a free account, OU users can check out any book in Open Libraries, as long as it is not already checked out by another user.

Again, see the link above for the full list but if there are specific resources you are looking for I'm happy to try to help you find those. In addition, I am available to assist you in whatever way I can to help you meet your teaching and research goals. We've transitioned a number of our workshops to online options, our presentation consultations are still available virtually, and I am available to provide library instruction and research consultations virtually as well. Please don't hesitate to reach out to me if you think there is something I can do for you.

Stay safe out there!

Brent N. Tweedy, M.S., Ph.D.

Science Librarian

University Libraries

University of Oklahoma

Bizzell Memorial Library Rm 235

405.325.5287

Schedule an Appointment

Pronouns: He/Him/His

