Frank F. Furstenberg, Jr. is the Zellerbach Family Professor, Emeritus of Sociology and Research Associate in the Population Studies Center at the University of Pennsylvania. His interest in the American family began at Columbia University where he received his Ph.D. in 1967. He is author of Managing to Make It: Urban Families in High-Risk Neighborhoods (University of Chicago Press, 1999) and Destinies of the Disadvantaged: Teenage Childbearing and Public Policy (Russell Sage Foundation, 2007). His previous books and articles center on children, youth, families, and the public. His current research projects focus on the family in the context of disadvantaged urban neighborhoods, adolescent sexual behavior, cross national research on children's well-being, and urban education. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and the Institute of Medicine.

The mission of the University of Oklahoma is to provide the best possible educational experience for our students through excellence in teaching, research and creative activity, and service to the state and society.
