

THE BUSINESS OF FINANCE

Manage money and financial performance as well as provide vital guidance while balancing risk and reward.

What's it like to be in finance?

Finance professionals evaluate past financial performance and forecast cash flows, returns and risk. Finance majors are competitive and adopt a unique, entrepreneurial perspective to think creatively about how people and companies interact to solve business problems. These principles can be applied across a wide range of settings including corporate finance, real estate, energy, commercial banking, wealth advising for individuals, families and beyond.

Why choose OU's Price College of Business?

Faculty Thought Leaders: The Division of Finance enjoys a top echelon reputation for the quality of its faculty reflected by more than 100 publications in top finance and economics journals, research excellence awards and elected positions in international professional associations.

Business Connections for Life: Price College of Business was named for financier Michael F. Price – so finance is part of our DNA. OU offers a tremendous alumni base in the financial sector as well rich experience amongst the students in the program.

What current students are saying:

"The level of excellence the program holds is challenging, yet it prepares me for my future in multiple ways. Through technical skills like financial modeling and analysis or professional development through networking events and workshops sponsored by student organizations like Women in Finance, the division is continually investing in its students. I've had the privilege of reaping these benefits that will last into my career."
–Jillienne Connell, junior finance student
