Commanding Officer Letter

Commanding Officer
CAPT Hall, USN

Spring 2020 was a semester like we have never seen before. We started the semester continuing with our operations in temporary facilities at CATE 3 dorms while the Armory renovation continued. As we moved through a busy semester, everything abruptly changed at Spring Break due to COVID-19 and the shifting of all classes and events to online and, ultimately, the virtual commissioning of 7 new commissioned officers.

The semester started with a busy schedule that included the honor of the unit serving as judges for the Western Heights Drill Meet, where the students' professionalism was on display and recognized from all those involved. In addition, we had our Spring Dining In where I had the honor again to see the spirit and camaraderie of the unit. The true pride of the unit and lifelong friendships that are being developed were fully on display and exhibited the true character of the amazing young men and women that make up this unit. Soon after the dining-in, the potential impacts of COVID-19 became obvious, and full planning was started that led to full online operations for the Spring semester.

Although it was challenging to shift to online operations, I was impressed with how engaged all students remained with the program's requirements. Focusing on academics became the priority as we finished the semester and ultimately conducted a virtual commissioning using Facebook and Zoom.

The pride and honor of commissioning our new officers remained the same, even in an unusual execution.

With all the unplanned changes this semester, the unit remains strong and found a way to meet all requirements while operating from our temporary facilities and virtually. Ultimately, the unit completed commissioning for all senior class members without any waivers, even with the virtual end of the semester.

It remains an honor to be part of this unit. I look forward to the potential that we will all be back in person next semester and conducting operations back in the fully renovated Armory.

Battalion Commander Letter

Battalion Commander
MIDN 1/C Warren

I was delighted to be given the privilege to serve this unit as the Battalion Commander for the Spring 2020 semester. The University of Oklahoma Naval ROTC unit has a long-standing tradition of excellence both inside the classroom and out in the fleet. To be a member of our great organization and to help lead it was truly an honor.

Starting my ROTC career as a freshman, I remember looking up to the seniors and wishing I had all the knowledge they did about the unit and how to flourish in it. I knew that with time and experience, I could one day be like many of them. However, I struggled deeply with comparing myself to others instead of focusing on my development as a midshipman and as a leader. Over time, I learned that while I can mirror certain traits I've seen in others, it's also important to be authentic. Instead of trying so hard to be someone else and to lead the way they did, I found that staying true to who I am as a leader made me more confident and the experience more enjoyable overall.

Despite our time being cut short and the challenges presented, I believe this semester was a success. This semester held many memories, whether they were wonderful, painful, or history-making. The members of this unit all have the unique opportunity to say they were in college and working for their commission during a global pandemic. Though COVID-19 halted many operations held within the unit, it did not keep us from working hard and pushing through the trying time. This challenge was new to everyone as we learned together how to continue with business as usual. While things might still not be back to normal come the Fall 2020 semester, I believe we all learned to appreciate the time we have with each other. I'm incredibly proud of this unit for keeping high spirits and for doing what they could to stay connected with each other. I could not ask for a better group of individuals to serve as the Battalion Commander this semester and I am truly humbled for being given the opportunity.
